A Wonderful Trip.

A party composed of the Misses Rosa and Katie Schroeder, Annie snd Maggie Liggan, Ollie Beason, Miss Lizzie Hill, Mesers Charley Moriey, W. A. Ritchie, E. H. Avey, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Avey of Salt Lake and a HERALD representative made a daring but successful trip to Obsermade a daring but successful trip to Observatory Peak, which rises in the air nearly ten thousand feet above the level of the sea, Sunday last.

The start was made from the city early in the morning and a route was chosen by way of Waterfall canon. At the waterfall an ascent was made over a dangerous precipice of over three hundred feet almost perpendicular in the air. The place was passed over safely when the clouds began to hug the rarged edges of the mountains closely, and in the midst of the sounds of thunder and the torrents of descending rain the party became separated by seeking.

perpendicular in the air. The place was passed over safely when the clouds began to hug the ragged edges of the mountains closely, and in the midst of the sounds of thunder and the torrents of descending rain the party became separated by seaking shelter beneath overhanging rocks, caves and a lone miner's cabin. Presently the clouds showed a clearing and the journey was continued over the rocks and into the wet weeds and other growing vegetation by the separated factions, each of whom began the endeavor to reach the destination first, by following deceiving and unbroken trails.

Shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon Shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon the first of the party arrived at the observatory station after the long and fatiging task of climbing, Miss Kate Schroeder winning the distinction of being the champion of the day. About two hours later the balance of the mountaineers—eight in number—reached the place, fully realizing the fact that they were not superiors when it comes to climbing the high mount of Wasatch.

It was after 6 o'clock before the descent was begun, and on having arrived at the was after 6 o'clock before the descent was begun, and on having arrived at the great falls several thousand feet below, the shades of night had come, and only by the light of torches secured from an empty miner's cabin was it possible to go down the deep crevice at the falls. The bottom was reached in safety only to be wondered at that some serious accident did not happen to some members of the party while scaling the treacherous looking rocks.

The mouth of the cahon was reached at midnight. And imagine the appearance of midnight. And imagine the appearance of the cahon was reached at the Reed yesterday.

J. A. Brown, of Omaha, Neb., was in the city, attending to business matters, yesterday.

midnight. And imagine the appearance of a tired and fatigued crowd when it was found that the conveyance which they hoped to find awaiting them there had also became tired and left. Nothing else could be done but to send to the city for could be done but to send to the city for teams enough to carry all to their homes.

After an hour and a half of patient waiting Corey Brothers bus arrived and it was past 2 o'clock before the awful trip was at an end. None, however, fet disparagingly of their trip and wonderful day's experiences.

Observatory peak is a piace seldom reached by any one, and it can be safely said that there were more ladies at the signal station on that day than ever before at one time.

The resumption of the outgo of gold checked a most promising upward movement among leading shares. The bears movement among leading shares. The bears made a vigorous demonstration against Burington in the forenoon and the raid was accompanied by the circulation of a story of a protected issue of bonds. This slightly affected the remainder of grangers, but flattering reports from growing crops render these shares almost impregnable.
